

Cyber Sleuths at Your Service

- The Corporate Information Security Office (CISO) is responsible for protecting the Postal Service brand and reputation by ensuring that information resources operate in a secure and trusted environment. The office also promotes information security awareness.
- CISO recently launched the CyberSafe at USPS initiative to inform employees about the importance of protecting information while using the Internet.

Learning more about the CISO's efforts to protect USPS information resources reflects an organization-wide commitment to information security.

And that's smart business.
