

Be One with the Trout. Don't Take the Bait.

Beware of scammers. Be wary of emails from senders you don't know. Incorrect grammar, spelling errors, generic salutations and requests for login or password information may indicate a phishing attempt.

As a general rule, don't open suspicious email attachments or text messages, or click on unknown links.

And that's smart business!