

Keep it Approachable

- What's the first thing a customer sees when visiting a post office? Most likely it's the grounds outside the building.
- A neat and clean approach assures customers that they will be conducting business at a place that cares about the outer package just as much as it does about the contents.

Keeping up with outdoor maintenance, including landscaping is cost effective and improves the customer experience.

And that's smart business.