

Lead Hazards

Take the lead out.

All Postal Service employees working with lead-based paint or lead-containing material must receive training in lead hazards and approved work practices. All work performed by contractors must be done in accordance with approved statements of work. Contractors must be monitored periodically to ensure their activities don't create lead-based paint hazards and that they comply with OSHA regulations.

USPS informs employees, contractors and other building occupants of the presence of lead-based paint if they're going to perform tasks that may create lead dust or fumes, and maintains lead-containing paint in good condition to keep it from becoming a hazard.

For more information review Management Instruction EL-890-2019-3.

And that's smart safety!

For additional information or guidance, contact your safety office.