

It's not always good to share

The Postal Service places a high priority on personal privacy and cybersecurity.

- Public access to postal mobile telephone numbers and postal email addresses may lead to phishing schemes and phone calls from the public after hours.
- When responding to a Freedom of Information Act request, postal mobile telephone numbers and postal email addresses may both be redacted by citing Exemption 3 with 39 U.S.C. § 410(c)(2) and Exemption 6.

Safeguarding USPS email addresses and mobile telephone numbers protects both our network and our employees' privacy.

And that's smart business.
